Should you invest in battery stocks?

Investors have many ways to play the "green wave," or the pivot to a net-zero carbon world, but alongside EV stocks, hydrogen fuel cell stocks, solar stocks and other renewable energy plays, battery stocks are another strong choice. A big reason is that the pivot away from fossil fuels will not happen without advanced battery technology.

Should you invest in solid-state battery stocks?

With numerous companies gearing up for production within the next few years, investor speculation surrounding solid-state battery stocks is reaching new heights. These innovative batteries offer a critical advantage, primarily via their vastly reduced charging times for EVs.

Should you buy EV battery stocks?

Investors don't have to pick a winning automaker -- they can buy shares of battery stocks instead. The range of options in EV battery stocks goes from pre-revenue to one of the world's biggest automakers. The automotive industry is going electric. Every major automaker is actively developing or already selling electric vehicles (EVs).

Should you buy EV/renewable stock in the battery space?

These types of stocks could make for a great way to gain broad exposure to this megatrend. Having said that, while the battery space offers broad EV/renewable exposure, don't assume buying any stock in this category is a worthwhile or potentially profitable move.

Should you buy battery stocks in 2024?

The International Energy Agency predicts a tenfold increase in battery demand for electric vehicles over the next decade. Battery stocks haven't fared well for much of 2024, but a big rally has put them back in the spotlight. The Global X Lithium & Battery Tech ETF (ticker: LIT) gained more than 20% in September.

Are battery Stock Exchange-Traded Funds a good investment?

Battery stock exchange-traded funds like BATT provide investors with exposure to leading U.S.-listed names in this space -- some of which will be discussed in further detail below. BATT also has holdings in foreign-based battery technology companies that are difficult for stateside investors to buy.

Another critical factor to consider when investing in oil stocks is oil prices (obviously). Energy stocks tend to rise when oil prices rise, and they tend to fall when oil prices fall. Oil prices have increased thus far in 2024, helping bolster most energy stocks (it's worth noting that US natural gas prices are down). Global investment in oil ...
